SHARK HAULED BACK TO SEA AFTER WASHING ASHORE OFF MALTESE COAST

This is the incredible moment a shark was rescued from rocks off the Maltese coast and returned to the sea.

The three-metre long female Blue Shark was washed ashore near Pembroke as strong waves pounded the coastline.

Experts from Sharklab Malta and the Malta National Aquarium made several attempts to rescue the shark, pulling it from the rocks several times over a period of two hours.

Greg Nowell from Sharklab said: 'There were strong currents and a very heavy swell which kept pushing the tired shark back into the bay.

'The Malta National Aquarium took over watching the shark and reported that the shark was swimming out towards deep water.

'Hopefully it is now back in the deep water where it belongs.'

He said it was very rare to see a shark swimming so close to shore.
