

A waiter looks at photographs at the opening of the European Parliament exhibition paying tribute to female refugees at the Malta Parliament on March 6. Photo: Chris Sant Fournier

Greg Nowell of Sharklab Malta tries to help a blue shark back into the water after it was washed ashore in Pembroke on March 7. Officials from Sharklab Malta and the National Aquarium said the 2.5-metre shark was weak and had likely been washed ashore by the rough waves. The blue shark is an absolutely harmless shark with no reported fatal attacks on humans, according to Sharklab Malta. Photo: Mark Zammit Cordina

Greg Nowell of Sharklab Malta tries to help a blue shark back into the water after it was washed ashore in Pembroke on March 7. Photo: Mark Zammit Cordina